

CAPT. BRICE WAY UP IN IDAHO.

WRITES ROOSEVELT TO HURRY MAIL TO THUNDER MOUNTAIN.

He is running the finest camp in the diggings and is the ideal of the gold-seekers—Already in Democratic politics and may run for Congress.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 21.—Capt. Stewart M. Brice, son of Calvin S. Brice, is a gold-seeker in the Thunder Mountain district. The men at the camp at Roosevelt held a meeting to protest against the delay of their mail, and they induced Capt. Brice to write the following letter to the President:

MY DEAR COMMANDER: Here in Idaho, some miles from civilization, fondly dream of the nights you and I lay beside our guns on San Juan Hill. There is no shooting game here, but the material for 1,000 Rough Riders is surrounding me at this midnight hour, as I sit by the candlelight to pen you these lines.

I am one of 1,000 who have failed to receive a letter for several months. Would a suggestion through the Postmaster-General's department facilitate that mail now slumbering between Boise and these diggings? I have and 1,000 others send greetings and love.

Young Brice is the Beau Brummel of the gold fields, and there is none in all the diggings whose popularity is greater. He arrived in Boise about the middle of June and made a host of friends by his liberality and good fellowship.

Having heard of Thunder Mountain and being of an adventurous disposition, Brice soon made up his mind to invade the gold camp, and accordingly, an outfit for the purpose was gathered together which surpassed anything that has ever gone out of Boise. The finest horses were procured and the party was accompanied by a cook and a packer, with six horses completely loaded, besides the saddle horses.

Brice made his appearance in the camp about sixty days ago. He pitched his tent in the suburbs of the town of Roosevelt. The first day in camp he unfurled a beautiful American flag above his headquarters, and since that time the Stars and Stripes have never ceased to wave in Thunder Mountain.

Brice is the type of Easterner that the Western man likes to meet. Ever since his arrival in camp he has been identified with its development. Three times each day he may be seen, with dinner pail in hand, climbing over the hills to his claims with his miners. He has a force of men at work developing his properties, and none of them works harder than he. His hands are calloused from swinging the drill, and he seems to enjoy the work.

Some of his Eastern friends in camp recently took him to task about overworking himself. They suggested desert hunters and other amusements, but Brice refused to join in and they are now leaving him alone. He told them that the life he is now leading skinned the old days in New York, when May Yoke and other stage celebrities were his associates.

If a miner is sick in any part of the camp he mounts a horse at a hour's notice and is off for his cabin. He has a well-stocked medicine chest with him and more than one trail-blazer owes his life to Brice's nursing and care.

In view of the election in Idaho this fall, the camp has not been without its political life, though it is far from the centre of activity. Brice has been one of the Democratic leaders, evincing many of the traits that made his father such a factor in politics.

Young Brice has been chosen as one of the delegates from Thunder Mountain to the Idaho County Democratic Convention, which will be held at Grangeville this month. He will remain in the gold camp until snow falls, developing his property. Then he will return to Boise, where he expects to take up his residence and become more thoroughly identified with the future of the State.

Brice went to Idaho last spring to establish a residence, and he intends to stay here as long as he can. He is a Republican here, but he resigned to go into the army in the war with Spain. He was a high roller in New York.

RAILROAD ORDERED SOLD.

The New York and Ottawa Insolvent—Indebtedness $2,085,000.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The New York and Ottawa Railroad, having seventy-one miles of track from Tupper Lake through Moha, Franklin county, to Cornwall Bridge on the St. Lawrence River, where the road crosses into Canada, has been ordered sold by Judge Cox of the United States Circuit Court under mortgage foreclosure proceedings which have been brought by the Morton Trust Company of New York. The decree was filed in the United States Circuit Court in this city this morning.

Judge Cox has appointed Charles G. Hays of this city as the special master to conduct the sale of the road at St. Regis, Franklin county, some time in November. He is directed by the decree to entertain bids for less than $100,000, and each bidder must deposit a check for $5,000 as a guarantee of good faith.

The New York and Ottawa Railroad has been insolvent for some time and its management has been in the hands of the receiver. In the decree filed this morning it is said that the indebtedness of the road is $2,085,327.36, all contracted since Aug. 1, 1890. Suit was begun to foreclose the bonds in June, 1900. The assets of the company include 2,465 shares of stock of the Cornwall Bridge Company.

SKELETON FOUND IN PATERSON.

Head and Extremities Missing and No Clue to Its Identity.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 21.—The authorities in this city are puzzled over the discovery here of a skeleton of a human being from which the head and extremities are missing.

A woman picking berries in the swampy ground at the end of New street, in West Paterson, found the skeleton yesterday evening, lying among the bushes, partly covered by an old rain coat. City Physician Van Noort examined the skeleton, on which there was not a trace of bone of flesh, and concluded that it had been exposed to the elements for nearly a year. He said that it was that of a person between 11 and 20 years of age, but he could not say whether it was the remains of a man or a woman.

The officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children thought that it might have been that of Anna Arns, 14 years old, who disappeared about two months ago, but the City Physician does not believe that the work of decomposition could have been so rapid.

The police are completely at sea on the case, and no theory has been presented as to the disappearance of the head, hands and feet.

Held for Robbing Dr. MacArthur.

Frank Castle of 120 West Sixty-first street, the former secretary to Dr. Robert S. MacArthur of Calvary Baptist Church, was arraigned in Jefferson Market police court yesterday and held in $1,000 bail for examination. He is charged with stealing a typewriter and $40 in cash from Dr. MacArthur's study on Aug. 4. Dr. MacArthur is in England on vacation. Castle, whose right name is said to be Burroughs, is an English actor.

WOMAN MURDERED BY THIEVES.

Body Found Beside a Lonely Road Near Cornish, Me.—Negro Suspected.

CORNISH, Me., Aug. 21.—Miss Olive Broad, 50 years old, was murdered while walking toward Cornish village from the Maine Central Mountain division station yesterday afternoon. Her body was found today near a logging road about a half mile from the village. There was a bruise over the right temple and two bullet wounds were found in the chest and another in the head near the right temple. Her own handkerchief had been stuffed into her mouth to prevent her making an outcry.

Robbery was the suspected motive. Her pocketbook, which she carried in a satchel and which is believed to have contained only a few dollars, was missing. Lewis Cook and wife, who had been having a fight the body when on their way home through the woods. Miss Broad had no near relatives. She lived with two aged women in the village and all three were employed sewing for a local clothing manufacturer. She had a few hundred dollars deposited in a country bank. The Olmpe family was in progress and it was supposed that some one who had been following the races committed the murder. The place where the crime was committed is about one-third of a mile from the nearest house. A farmhouse in that vicinity was broken into while the family was away yesterday and some money and provisions were stolen. A negro who has been following the races is detained pending an investigation, but the officers believe he will be able to prove an alibi.

SCRAP BETWEEN BOOKMAKERS.

Joe Ullman and George Meyer Entertain Guests of the Grand Union Hotel.

SARATOGA, Aug. 21.—A scrap between "Joe" Ullman and George Meyer, two bookmakers who do business at the Saratoga track, entertained the guests of the Grand Union Hotel and everybody else within a block late to-night.

Ullman and Meyer were having an animated discussion in front of the hotel and their gesticulations and loud tones had attracted a big crowd. Suddenly Meyer made a grab for Ullman and the two went down in a heap, each doing the best he could to throw the other.

William Lloyd, another bookmaker, and several other men jumped in and the fighters were dragged apart, each clamoring loudly for "let me see the other." The sum total of the casualties was as follows: Ullman, one rumpled collar; Meyer, one skinned elbow.

The cause of the scrap harks back to a complaint made this afternoon by Meyer to the stewards of the racing association against Kid Weller, a man connected with Ullman's book. Meyer told the stewards that Weller "let me see the other" and that he was not to be disciplined if not ruled off the track.

Ullman was summoned to tell his story and while admitting that Weller had "let me see the other," he said that he knew nobody. Ullman went in but out of his way to inform the stewards of Meyer's record and to add that Meyer could not fight for "let me see the other," go back to the place where he came from.

PACKERS TO MEET IN CHICAGO.

Looks Like a Sale of the Cudahy Interests to the Armour.

OMAHA, Aug. 21.—While the report that the Cudahy Packing Company has been sold to the meat combine has been denied by Michael Cudahy, head of the house, it is fully believed in Omaha and among the South Omaha packers that negotiations are going on. It became known today that the heads of the Cudahy and Armour companies had been called to Chicago, where they will meet E. A. Cudahy coming from Michigan, where he has been spending the summer, and J. Ogden Armour, who returned from Europe yesterday. General Manager Howe for Armour and Tulliver for Cudahy left Omaha last night for Chicago.

Orders were issued yesterday to all of Armour's travelling representatives to come to South Omaha for a conference on Sept. 1. It is reported that similar orders will be issued by the other packers. It is feared that the meeting presages a wholesale discharge of the traveling men.

Orders were issued yesterday to all of Armour's travelling representatives to come to South Omaha for a conference on Sept. 1. It is reported that similar orders will be issued by the other packers. It is feared that the meeting presages a wholesale discharge of the traveling men.

Orders were issued yesterday to all of Armour's travelling representatives to come to South Omaha for a conference on Sept. 1. It is reported that similar orders will be issued by the other packers. It is feared that the meeting presages a wholesale discharge of the traveling men.

Orders were issued yesterday to all of Armour's travelling representatives to come to South Omaha for a conference on Sept. 1. It is reported that similar orders will be issued by the other packers. It is feared that the meeting presages a wholesale discharge of the traveling men.

Orders were issued yesterday to all of Armour's travelling representatives to come to South Omaha for a conference on Sept. 1. It is reported that similar orders will be issued by the other packers. It is feared that the meeting presages a wholesale discharge of the traveling men.

GOV. ODELL AT NIAGARA.

He and His Party View the Whirlpool Rapids by Searchlight.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Gov. Odell and party viewed the chaotic waters of the Niagara Gorge by searchlight to-night. In the party were Governor and Mrs. Odell, Senator Ellsworth, Mrs. Angus Bissell, Miss Ruth Bissell, E. C. Hopkins, Ellsworth Green, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hellmer, Sheriff Spaulding of Lockport, Miss Prentice and B. B. Hopkins of Milwaukee, Mrs. H. A. B. Martin of Pittsburgh, Postmaster Salt, Supt. Welch, Collector Low and Mayor Hancock of Niagara Falls.

They boarded a private car and ran down the gorge to the whirlpool rapids, and from there they went to the Whirlpool, where they alighted for ten minutes. The torrent was portrayed to them in several colors, each change being hailed with expressions of admiration. This night's spectacle of the Niagara chasm was a revelation to them all. It was 9:30 o'clock when they returned to the city, leaving at 10 o'clock by trolley for Lockport.

CRAZY BOSS FOR TUNNEL WORK.

Jumped Into the Excavation and Yelled Orders to the Men.

Shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning, a short, well-dressed man with fair hair ran up to the edge of the tunnel excavation at Amsterdam avenue and Seventh second street, peered off his coat, vest, collar, necktie and shirt and hurriedly climbed down into the excavation.

"Hi, go to work, you men! I'm boss here!" The workmen chased the man out but he reappeared at intervals during the morning, wildly shouting orders.

Policeman Kenney of the West Sixty-eighth street station finally arrested him and took him to the West Side police court, where he said he was John Donohue, 28 years old, of 80 Lawrence street. Magistrate Mott committed the man to Bellevue for examination as to his sanity.

CYCLIST INJURED BY POLICEMAN.

Hit Him From Behind, Broke His Wrist and Snatched Away.

Policeman Charles Bradley of the Gates avenue station in Brooklyn, while on patrol duty about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, was knocked down and severely injured by a reckless bicycle rider. The accident occurred when Bradley was crossing Marcy avenue at Greene.

The bicyclist came up suddenly from behind and struck him on the back hurting him against the curb. The rider had disappeared before the policeman picked himself up. Bradley received a fracture of the left wrist and several bad bruises. He was removed to St. Mary's Hospital.

Held for Robbing Dr. MacArthur.

Col. William H. Hubbell III.

Col. William H. Hubbell, commander of the Spanish War Veterans' Association in Brooklyn, is seriously ill at the residence of Dr. MacArthur, 639 St. Mark's avenue, Brooklyn, where an operation was performed on him Tuesday. Col. Hubbell was in command of the Forty-seventh Regiment in Porto Rico and is one of the best-known and most popular military men in Brooklyn.

GOT WHOLE GREEN GOODS GANG.

POST OFFICE INSPECTORS WIND UP A YEAR'S WORK.

The Steerer, the Trailer, the Keepers, the Turners and the Come-on All Gathered In, Some in Newark and Some in New York—Bogus Money Package, Too.

The Post Office inspectors are feeling good over the arrest of Joe Brown, William Henley and four others for the green goods swindle, which is a stale old game, ever young, of offering counterfeit treasury notes for sale cheap and skinning the other rascal who comes to buy them by taking his good money and selling him green paper. The two men named were held in $2,500 each by United States Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday for examination, charged with using the mails for improper purposes. Commissioner Whitehead in Newark had held on similar charges Joseph R. Baker, Elmer Brown, alias Paddy Garry, S. Gottlieb, Brown and Henley. The "come-on," an Italian, Antonio Caporossi of New Haven, is detained as a witness. It is understood that, in view of the value of his testimony to the Federal authorities, he will not be prosecuted.

We have struck at the backbone of the green goods gang," said Chief Inspector Theodore W. Swift, of the New York division of Post Office inspectors yesterday. "And we have dealt a death blow to the meanest swindle, bar none, that has ever existed in this country. It's taken me over a year to lay the plans for to-day's killing and twelve months of the most careful work by my men to consummate it. These green-goods men are sharp. They dress and appear like gentlemen and every move they make is under the advice of expert lawyers. When I nabbed Joe Brown and Henley last night at Church and Cortlandt streets you might have taken them for two prosperous Jersey commuters."

"I cannot see why you should make such a mistake," Mr. Swift, said Brown to me in the Church street station. "It's a serious matter looking two gentlemen in a cell."

"Their manner was so convincing that if I hadn't had a twelve months' fight to make me sure I would have almost doubted myself."

"It's a rare thing to catch the whole outfit at one fell swoop, a good 'come-on,' 'steerer,' 'trailer,' 'turner' and 'keepers' all in a bunch. It's a really rare thing to catch the king-bird crowd of crooks of this whole country at the same hawk."

Mr. Swift was aided in his long hunt by Deputy Inspector Boyle. When they were ready for arrest, Inspector Cortney—a brother of President Roosevelt's secretary—Inspector Duryea of Philadelphia and Inspectors McMillan and Bulman of Boston, all little known to crooks hereabouts, were called in.

Antonio Caporossi, had by his own admission, come on with $500 to Newark on Tuesday to "get rich quick," by buying $1,500 in greenbacks, guaranteed quite as good as the Government product. Inspector Boyle saw Elmer Brown the "steerer" meet the Italian at the Pennsylvania station and take him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly found the other inspectors and together they saw Brown and the Italian leave the little house and go to the head for the railway station again. Brown carried a small box, presumably filled with the Italian's purchase. Joseph Baker was the "trailer" and took him to a small house at 25 West street. Then Boyle quickly